A group of people are participating in an Everest challenge simulation. They are wearing helmets, goggles, and harnesses, and are standing on a series of black steps that simulate a mountain climb. The background is a large screen displaying a snowy mountain landscape. A man in a white vest is standing to the right, possibly acting as an instructor or guide. The event is taking place in a well-lit indoor space with a modern, industrial aesthetic.

What Happens At Your Event?

On the day of your event, everyone will arrive at the venue before hearing a short introductory briefing from your activity host. They will explain how the day will run before splitting everyone up into smaller teams.

During the event, each team will get to assign roles and responsibilities to each team member depending on their skill sets - For example, those that are more analytical may be assigned to navigational and supporting roles, whilst those with physical abilities may be assigned to the more intense challenges. However, it's up to you to decide!

By the end of the event, each team will have had the chance to take part in each challenge before reaching the top of Mount Everest... and once you do, everyone will inevitably feel a massive sense of achievement from working together effectively to achieve a common goal.
